

Fucking Record Again

...but they themselves thought that most of it was embarrassing.

A long line formed when Rebecca Liljeberg and Alexandra Dahlström from Show Me Love signed books yesterday. They beat Nilecity boys record at the Pocket Shop at the mall in Stockholm.

- But it is embarrassing to sign someone else's book, they say about Lukas Moodysson's script.
- Rebecca Liljeberg, 17, and Alexandra Dahlström, 14 are missing their director when Show Me Love fans formed a queue that ended far outside the bookstore.
- I'm sad that Luuk is not here, it is his work. But his son's birthday is today, says Rebecca.
- But it is fun to sit here and pretend that you are the author, says clearly amused Alexandra, donning sparkles for the day.

SUCCESSFUL SIGNING

Rebecca Liljeberg and Alexandra Dahlström thrived at a book signing yesterday. "It's fun to sit here and pretend that you are the author," said Alexandra.

Want to be a writer

As in the film, Rebecca Liljeberg has ambitions to be an author.

- Before it was poetry, I'm just writing generally, says Rebecca who is willing to return to the book signing table - as a writer.
- But there's nothing I'm struggling with right now. Maybe it will be as a beautiful day, she says gently.

The crowd was comprised of eager fans and parents who bought Christmas presents for their children.

- Oh, I have no autograph, just an illegible scribble, says Rebecca.

410,000 people have seen the movie.

- One in 20 Swedes... you cannot imagine, says Rebecca.

Many ask for a continuance.

- There will be no sequel, says Rebecca Liljeberg. It would just be destroyed then.

New trend with chocolate milk

Instead, she has just finished as the lead role in Sherdil Tiger Heart, which will premiere in August.

- I play a girl who saves the life of a horse set to be slaughtered.

The book Show Me Love contains a letter from a girl who writes that chocolate milk has become a trend among lesbians to drink after the movie.

- That is so awesome. She writes that is it the new pick-up drink - and it works for her, says Rebecca Liljeberg.
